

You have the power to change your life

In today's fast-paced world, life can feel overwhelming. Many of us need tranquilisers to get through the night and mood boosters to brighten our days. The thought of self spoils the show. Obsessing over self drains your energy, enthusiasm, and creativity. It leads to errors, mediocrity, and failure.

The Bhagwad Gita encourages you to work in a spirit of yajna – service and sacrifice – for a higher cause. The universe seems to work in a spirit of yajna.

The Sun gives valuable light and heat. Flowers give fragrance, birds sing, peacocks dance, rivers give life. No element in nature works with a selfish purpose except humans. Only human beings suffer from anxiety and stress. Krishn says emphatically in the Gita – work unselfishly, and you will attain success, happiness, and spiritual growth. Selfishness only gives misery.

Everyone is born with a distinctive gift, an inborn talent. What's yours? Identify your talent. This can be a game-changer. The world would have lost iconic sportspersons if Sachin Tendulkar had become a CA or Nadal had taken to business. Set a lofty, audacious goal in the area of your passion.

Then put in hard work, grit and perseverance to achieve your objective. Set aside your favourite movies, dining out, or hanging out with friends. Direct all your actions towards your goal. There is no easy way to success. Kobe Bryant, the legendary basketball player, would start training at 4am every day. Cricketers, athletes, and musicians work hard to achieve their dreams. Are you ready to put in the effort?

Sharpen your intellect. The intellect thinks, reasons, and navigates life's challenges. When the intellect directs your actions toward the goal, you generate energy. Feel deeply for your goal, be devoted to it, love it, and work consistently for it. Concentrate on every action without meandering to past worry or future anxiety. The results will be astounding.

Nobody can achieve greatness alone. Recognise the pivotal role of teamwork in achieving success. Inspire others with a higher purpose. Reach out to them with love and affection. Give them a reason to come to work excitedly, for the cause, not just their paycheque. Empathise, appreciate and applaud.

They will rise to the occasion and serve the cause. They will do their best to achieve the goal. The positive impact will be profound. Share the spoils with your team members. Give them the credit they deserve. You will achieve outstanding results.

Society equates success solely with money. Is it restricted to material riches? The Gita teaches us that true success goes beyond mere wealth. It's about happiness and fulfilment. Invest in your happiness and personal growth, and wealth will follow effortlessly.

Are you ready to tap into your limitless potential? Start today by shifting your focus from profiteering to offering. Identify your passion, work hard, and engage with others meaningfully. Embrace the journey of self-discovery. You have the power to change your life and inspire those around you.

Let's unleash that greatness together. Each step brings you closer to becoming the extraordinary person you were meant to be. Whether through your work, relationships, or creative pursuits, the world is waiting for what you can offer. [Practice exercise]
