Story in English

Neemgaon was a small, peaceful village, but it lacked proper sanitation. People still practiced open defecation, and hygiene was not a priority. Among the villagers lived Munna, a keen (eager-उत्सुक) and curious Class 5 student who loved going to school.

One day, Munna suddenly fell sick with high fever and stomach pain. The doctor said his illness was caused by unhygienic conditions and starvation (malnutrition-भूखमरी). Many other children in the village also started showing similar symptoms.

Old wells and drains, now completely defunct (non-functioning-अप्रचलित), were still being used. But sadly, most villagers remained indifferent. A sense of apathy (lack of concern-उदासीनता) filled the village.

That's when Dr. Prakash, the health officer from the block, arrived. He gathered the villagers and explained the dangers of poor sanitation. "The cause of this illness is evident (clearly visible-स्पष्ट), yet you're ignoring it," he said.

He spoke of how open defecation carries a social stigma (shame-कलंक), and worse – it risks lives. "Your children's health is being vitiated (corrupted/polluted-दूषित / भ्रष्ट) by this environment," he warned. "Many are developing serious impairments (deterioration-बाधा) because of repeated exposure to unclean surroundings."

Munna's health became tense (critical and anxious-तनावपूर्ण). He was rushed to the block hospital. His condition acted as an alarming (shocking-चिंताजनक) wake-up call for the entire village.

Sarpanch Arvind Yadav, who earlier believed building toilets was unnecessary, had a change of heart after witnessing Munna's suffering. He called a village meeting and launched the campaign: "Clean Neemgaon, Healthy Neemgaon."

Villagers came together with keen (enthusiastic-उत्सुक) efforts – toilets were built, wells were cleaned, drains were covered, and children were educated about hygiene.

Within months, Neemgaon transformed. Sickness declined, school attendance rose, and most importantly – Munna was back on his feet, smiling and studying again.

Story in Hindi

नीमगांव एक सुंदर लेकिन पिछड़ा हुआ गांव था जहाँ अभी भी लोग खुले में शौच करते थे। कक्षा 5 का छात्र मुन्ना एक उत्सुक (keen) और होशियार बच्चा था, जिसे स्कूल जाना बहुत पसंद था।

एक दिन मुन्ना की तबीयत अचानक बिगड़ गई। उसे तेज बुखार और पेट में दर्द हो गया। डॉक्टर ने बताया कि ये बीमारी भूखमरी (starvation) और गंदे वातावरण की वजह से फैली है।

गांव में कई और बच्चे बीमार पड़ने लगे। कई पुराने कुएं और नालियां अब अप्रचलित (defunct) हो चुके थे, फिर भी लोग वहीं पानी इस्तेमाल कर रहे थे। लेकिन गांव वाले इस पर कोई ध्यान नहीं दे रहे थे – सबमें एक तरह की उदासीनता (apathy) थी।

डॉ. प्रकाश, एक जिम्मेदार स्वास्थ्य अधिकारी, गांव में पहुंचे। उन्होंने समझाया कि अगर साफ-सफाई नहीं रखी गई तो हालात और बिगड़ेंगे। उन्होंने कहा, “ये सब कुछ स्पष्ट (evident) है, लेकिन आप लोग अब भी आंखें मूंदे हुए हैं।”

उन्होंने बताया कि गंदगी से जुड़ा कलंक (stigma) समाज में सिर्फ शर्म की बात नहीं, बल्कि जानलेवा भी हो सकता है। गंदे वातावरण ने बच्चों की सेहत दूषित (vitiated) कर दी है और उनके शरीर में कई प्रकार की बाधाएं (impairments) पैदा हो रही हैं।

मुन्ना की हालत इतनी तनावपूर्ण (tense) हो गई कि उसे ब्लॉक हॉस्पिटल ले जाना पड़ा। ये घटना गांव वालों के लिए एक चिंताजनक (alarming) संकेत थी।

सरपंच अरविन्द यादव पहले साफ-सफाई को महत्व नहीं देते थे। लेकिन मुन्ना की हालत देखकर उनका दृष्टिकोण बदल गया। उन्होंने गांव में एक अभियान शुरू किया – “स्वच्छ नीमगांव, स्वस्थ नीमगांव।”

सभी लोग एकजुट होकर काम में लग गए। शौचालय बनाए गए, कुओं की सफाई हुई, नालियों को ढका गया। बच्चे, बूढ़े, महिलाएं – सभी ने इस अभियान में उत्सुक (keen) भागीदारी की।

कुछ ही महीनों में नीमगांव पूरी तरह बदल गया। अब वहां बीमारियां नहीं थीं, स्कूल की उपस्थिति बढ़ गई, और सबसे खास – मुन्ना अब फिर से मुस्कुराता था।
