

A Helmet Doesn't Make a Head!

A jackal was running through a battleground, when he came upon a beautiful wrought metal helmet. "Oh, this is nice," he said to himself, putting on the helmet and looking at his reflection in a pond.

The jackal went back to his cronies and strutting among them, shouted, "All of you, fall in line immediately!"

When no one seemed interested, he stood on a large rock and shouted again, "I am your General! You have to follow my orders!"

When none of the others moved, the jackal got annoyed.

"Do you see this helmet on my head?" he rant. "Do you know what it means?"

An old jackal came up to him.

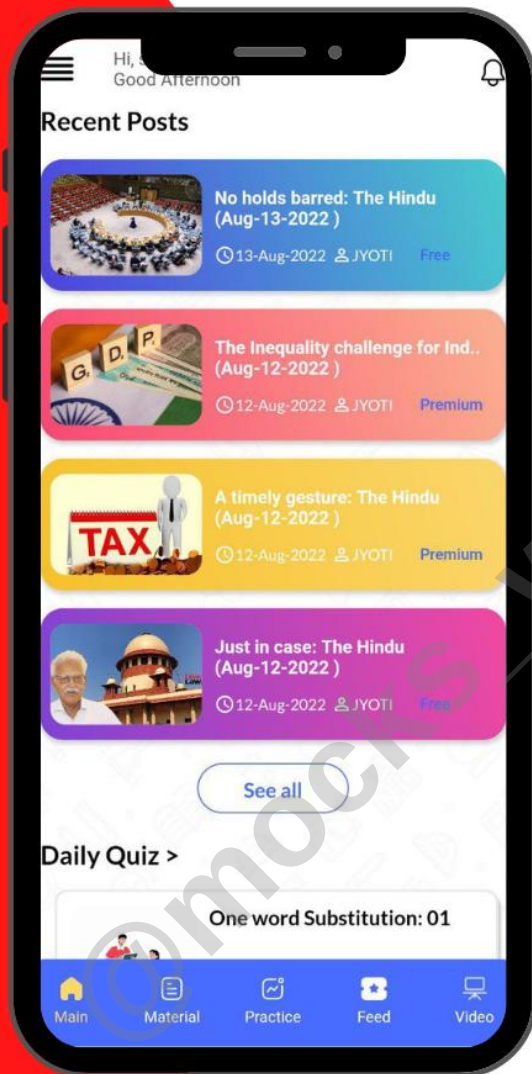

"Wearing a helmet cannot make you a general. You have to prove yourself a leader first."

The hot sun heated up the helmet so much, that when the jackal tried to take it off, it stuck fast! He was left standing on the rock, looking foolish.

Moral: Clothes do not make a man.
